

Do you serve only girls?

Since we became a non-profit in 2013, Project Scientist has focused on creating programs for girls. We do so to help address the significant gender gap in STEM degrees and STEM careers, and to encourage girls that a STEM career is attainable for any girl who wants one. We are happy to serve any child age 4 to 12, regardless of gender identity, who wishes to join our programs.

Project Scientist families and staff are passionate about supporting girls and women in STEM. Our programs feature female STEM Superstars from top companies so that girls may imagine themselves in these roles someday. We encourage girls to ask questions, be brave and never give up.

At Project Scientist:

We believe in a world that prioritizes the inclusion of women and girls' in science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM).

We believe in challenging the status quo by bringing high-quality STEM programming to ALL girls, regardless of income or race.

We believe in making capital markets work for us by partnering with STEM companies to develop the most talented workforce.

We believe that parents have options, and we want to be their first choice in STEM education.

We believe that as staff, volunteers, and beneficiaries, we must choose what is right and not what is easy. We must build a STEM ecosystem that rejects complacency and imagines a scientific community as it could be.

We believe that including women at the highest tables in the STEM industry will drive innovation and solve our world's most pressing challenges.
